KEY STORY

US presses SPDC on reforms

In November, US President Barack Obama, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, and two high level State Department officials traveled to Asia and explained Washington's new Burma policy to key stakeholders in Burma, and to ASEAN and regional leaders. [For more information and analysis of the new US Burma policy, please see Altsean briefer New US policy: an alibi for regional complacency].

- 3-4 November: A US delegation headed by US Assistant Secretary of State for East Asia and Pacific Affairs Kurt Campbell and the Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Asia and the Pacific and Ambassador for ASEAN Affairs Scot Marciel conducted a two-day "exploratory" mission to Burma.

- 12 November: US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton discussed Burma in Manila during a two-day visit to the Philippines.
- 14-15 November: US President Barack Obama spoke on Burma during a speech in Tokyo. While attending the first ever US-ASEAN Summit in Singapore as part of his Asia tour, he reiterated calls for the release of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and all other political prisoners.

Obama, Clinton, and Campbell and Marciel all delivered a consistent message to the SPDC: Washington will consider lifting sanctions only when the SPDC has released Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and all other political prisoners, and engaged in genuine dialogue with all pro-democracy and ethnic nationality groups.

Obama defies ASEAN, calls for Daw Suu's release

On 14 November in Tokyo, US President Barack Obama called on the SPDC to unconditionally release all political prisoners including Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, end conflicts with ethnic groups, and have a “genuine dialogue” with pro-democracy forces and ethnic nationalities. Obama said these steps were a “precondition for any softening of sanctions” against the junta.<sup>1</sup>

On 15 November, Obama held talks with SPDC PM Gen Thein Sein on the sidelines of the US-ASEAN Summit and urged the SPDC to release Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and all other political prisoners.<sup>2</sup> In a joint statement, ASEAN and the US said the 2010 elections “must be conducted in a free, fair, inclusive and transparent manner in order to be credible to the international community.”<sup>3</sup> ASEAN leaders scuttled any mention of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi's continued detention in the Summit's final statement.<sup>4</sup>

Clinton holds the line

On 12 November in Manila, US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton renewed her call for the SPDC to unconditionally release Daw Aung San Suu Kyi.<sup>5</sup> Clinton also said that Washington had no plans to drop sanctions but was trying to encourage the SPDC to enter into a dialogue with “all the stakeholders, including Aung San Suu Kyi.”<sup>6</sup>

Campbell and Marciel deliver the message

On 3 November, Campbell and Marciel met with numerous SPDC officials including Minister for Science and Technology Thaung in Naypyidaw.<sup>7</sup> They also met with various officials and representatives from pro-junta groups but failed to meet with SPDC Chairman Sr Gen Than Shwe.<sup>8</sup>

On 4 November, Campbell and Marciel met SPDC PM Gen Thein Sein before departing for Rangoon.<sup>9</sup> Campbell said that he offered the SPDC improved relations with the US if the regime moved toward democracy. He also called on the SPDC to open a dialogue with pro-democracy forces and ethnic nationalities. Campbell urged the junta to allow Daw Aung San Suu Kyi more freedom to meet with her party's senior executives.<sup>10</sup>

In Rangoon, Campbell and Marciel met with Daw Aung San Suu Kyi at the Inya Lake Hotel in Rangoon.<sup>11</sup> They also met separately with NLD representatives and ethnic nationality leaders.<sup>12</sup> The NLD leaders told the two US officials to include the revision of the 2008 constitution as one of the main topics of discussion in its engagement with the SPDC. They stressed that without revising the constitution there could be no free and fair elections and no start to the process of national reconciliation.<sup>13</sup> NLD Central Executive Committee member Win Tin made it clear that the party would not participate in the 2010 elections unless the junta revised the constitution.<sup>14</sup> Ethnic nationality leaders expressed a similar point of view and pointed out that the problems with the constitution need to be addressed before the 2010 elections.<sup>15</sup> They also urged the two US officials to include dialogue with ethnic nationality groups as a key component of the new US policy with Burma.<sup>16</sup>

On 5 November, after leaving Burma, Marciel said that elections in Burma could not be regarded as free and fair if Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and the NLD were not allowed to participate.<sup>17</sup> Marciel also said that the US would not lift its sanctions on the regime unless the SPDC makes concrete progress toward democratic reform.<sup>18</sup>

INSIDE BURMA

Daw Suu reaches out

Following up on her 25 September letter to Sr Gen Than Shwe [See September 2009 Burma Bulletin], on 11 November Daw Aung San Suu Kyi sent a second letter to the SPDC Chairman. In the letter, Daw Suu reiterated her willingness to cooperate with the SPDC “for the benefit of the country” and requested a meeting with Than Shwe.<sup>19</sup> Daw Suu also sought permission to meet with other members of the NLD Central Executive Committee at her lakeside home.<sup>20</sup>

Despite Daw Aung San Suu Kyi’s willingness to work with the SPDC to find a solution to Burma’s political crisis, the junta continued to toy with her:

- 2 November: The SPDC barred NLD Vice-Chairman Tin Oo from participating in a meeting between Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and the party’s Central Executive Committee.<sup>21</sup> As a result, Daw Suu cancelled the meeting.<sup>22</sup>
- 9 November: The SPDC Foreign Ministry Director-General Min Lwin hinted that the junta might release Daw Aung San Suu Kyi to allow her to play a role in the 2010 elections. “There is a plan to release her soon [...],” Min Lwin said in Manila.<sup>23</sup> However, hopes for Daw Suu’s release were quickly dashed on 12 November, when Min Lwin backtracked and said that he had been misquoted.<sup>24</sup>

SPDC reshuffles

In mid-November, it was reported that Lt Gen Myint Swe, the Commander of the Bureau of Special Operation 5 and a protégé of Sr Gen Than Shwe, had replaced Lt Gen Tin Aung Myint Oo as the SPDC Quartermaster General. Tin Aung Myint Oo maintained his position as SPDC Secretary-1.<sup>25</sup> The appointment of Myint Swe made him the top candidate to succeed Than Shwe as the SPDC Army's next Commander-in-Chief.<sup>26</sup>

The SPDC also demoted Brig Gen Khin Yi from National Police Chief to Deputy Religious Affairs Minister. The re-assignment of Khin Yi was linked to his suspected role in allowing ousted Rangoon Divisional Police Chief Col Win Naing to flee abroad while in his custody.<sup>27</sup>

SPDC extends BGF deadline

Ethnic ceasefire groups continued to resist the SPDC's Border Guard Force (BGF) ultimatum. As a result, the SPDC was forced to extend its 31 October deadline for the groups to accept the proposal to the end of December.

- 7 November: The United Wa State Army (UWSA) and the National Democratic Alliance Army (NDAA) met in Panghsang, Shan State. Both groups told the SPDC that their militias had to remain independent of the SPDC Army for the BGF proposal to be acceptable<sup>28</sup> The SPDC ignored the proposal.<sup>29</sup>
- 14 November: SPDC Army and UWSA officials met in Tang Yan in Northern Shan State and failed to reach an agreement on the BGF issue. The SPDC extended the deadline to accept the BGF proposal until the end of December.<sup>30</sup> However, the UWSA and NDAA said that they had compromised too much already and called on the SPDC Army to leave their territories.<sup>31</sup>
- 21 November: UWSA and NDAA leaders meeting in Panghsang, Shan State, reaffirmed their position that they are willing to transform into BGF units without SPDC Army oversight.<sup>32</sup> They said they would “not accept junta officers at the battalion levels [...] or admit junta state officials to run their domains.”<sup>33</sup>

Internal instability increases drug exports

On 26 November, the UN Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) released a report titled “2009 Patterns and Trends of Amphetamine-Type Stimulants and Other Drugs in East and South-East Asia.”<sup>34</sup> The report said that:<sup>35</sup>

- In 2008, Burma reported an increase in Amphetamine-Type Stimulants (ATS) use for the sixth consecutive year.
- Illicit manufacture of methamphetamines continued in Burma, particularly in Shan State's Wa and Kokang regions.
- ATS produced in Burma have been smuggled to nearby countries such as Thailand, Bangladesh, Laos, Malaysia, and Vietnam.
- Health and social costs attributed to ATS use in the region have soared. In Thailand, one of the countries most affected by Burma's amphetamine exports, the jump was particularly extreme with more than 70,000 treatment admissions for the amphetamine use in 2008, up from about 20,000 four years earlier - a 250% increase.<sup>36</sup>

In addition, the report said that political instability in Shan State might serve as a push factor for illicit drugs and relocation of clandestine manufacturing sites across its borders. UNODC representative Gary Lewis said that Burma's armed ethnic groups have increasingly cashed in their illegal drugs production in anticipation of a SPDC crackdown.<sup>37</sup>

Calls for protection, transparency accompany new aid initiatives

In November, donors pledged over US$230 million in new aid initiatives.

- 12 November, The Global Fund, which pulled out of Burma in 2005 because of SPDC interference, pledged US$110 million in new aid to Burma over two years to fight HIV/AIDS, malaria, and tuberculosis.<sup>38</sup>
- 21 November: Australian FM Stephen Smith said Australia will pledge an additional AU$15 million (US$13.5 million) in humanitarian aid to cyclone Nargis survivors.<sup>39</sup>
- 25 November: The Tripartite Core Group and the EU announced that they had raised US$88 million and US$21 million respectively for cyclone Nargis relief efforts at the Post-Nargis Assistance Conference (PONAC) in Bangkok.<sup>40</sup> The same day, the UN said that 178,000 cyclone survivors were still living in makeshift homes in the delta.<sup>41</sup>

The influx of new aid initiatives drew warnings from observers who urged that the new aid be closely monitored and that aid workers be better protected. On 24 November, Amnesty International urged international donors attending the PONAC to pressure the SPDC to end its harassment of aid workers and activists providing humanitarian assistance to survivors of cyclone Nargis.<sup>42</sup> On 25 November, Sean Turnell, professor of economics at Australia's Macquarie University, warned that aid would not effectively reach those who need it most because Burma lacks accountability, transparency, and the political space necessary for the effective delivery of aid.<sup>43</sup>

Landmine casualties increase

On 12 November, the International Campaign to Ban Landmines (ICBL) released its annual Landmine Monitor Report.<sup>44</sup> The report's findings as it pertained to Burma stated that:<sup>45</sup>

- The SPDC was the world's only government to both produce and use antipersonnel mines in 2008.
- Both SPDC Army troops and ethnic armed opposition groups continued to use antipersonnel mines through 2008 and 2009.
- In 2008, there were 721 reported casualties, a 64% increase from the 438 casualties recorded in 2007.
- There were 2,325 casualties (175 killed, 2002 injured, and 148 unknown) from 1999 to 2008.
- Twenty-three Townships in Chin, Karen, Karenni, Mon, Arakan, and Shan States, as well as in Pegu and Tenasserim Divisions, suffered from antipersonnel mine contamination.

SPDC recruitment of child soldiers continues

Recent UN reports and resolutions on child soldiers in Burma showed that the SPDC has not kept its promise to end its recruitment of child soldiers.

A 28 October report from the UN Security Council Working Group (SCWG) on Children and Armed Conflict in Burma expressed concern regarding reports of new recruitment of children by the SPDC Army.<sup>46</sup>

On 19 November, the UN General Assembly's Third Committee passed a resolution [See below UNGA Committee condemns SPDC] that called on the SPDC Army to end the recruitment of child soldiers and "to intensify measures to ensure the protection of children from armed conflict." The resolution also called on the junta to cooperate with the UN Special Representative for Children and Armed Conflict by granting her/him access to conflict areas where child soldiers are recruited.<sup>47</sup>

On 16 November, Aye Myint, a labor activist in Pegu Division, said that the SPDC Army had conscripted at least 112 underage youths between May and November of this year.<sup>48</sup>

HUMAN RIGHTS

Arrests and prison sentences

- 13 November: The SPDC sentenced protester Kan Myint to an additional eight-year-prison term under the Unlawful Association Act. Kan Myint, a member of the Myanmar Development Committee, will now serve a total of 18 years in prison.<sup>49</sup>
- 16 November: Na Sa Ka personnel from Area 6 in Maungdaw Township, Arakan State, arrested the Aung Mangala Village Peace and Development Council (VPDC) Chairman Khin Maung Gyi for providing information to BBC and VOA.<sup>50</sup>
- 18 November: Na Sa Ka personnel detained a monk from Aung Mangala Village in Maungdaw Township, Arakan State, for providing anti-regime information to BBC and VOA.<sup>51</sup>
- 19 November: A court in Maungdaw, Arakan State, sentenced VPDC Chairman Abdu Rashid to seven years in prison on charges of setting up a primary school without authorization.<sup>52</sup>

Detention conditions

- 4 November: Former SPDC FM Win Aung, 65, died from a stroke in Insein prison where he was serving a seven-year sentence for corruption.<sup>53</sup>
- 5 November: It was reported that NLD member Ni Mo Hlaing was hospitalized in Thayet Prison, Magwe Division.<sup>54</sup>
- 7 November: Win Maung, a 40-year-old resident of Letpadan Township, Pegu Division, died hours after police beat him during interrogation.<sup>55</sup>
- 25 November: It was reported that 88 Generation Student Min Ko Naing, who is detained in Kengtung prison, Shan State, needed immediate medical care and treatment for hypertension.<sup>56</sup>

Forced labor complaints soar despite SPDC harassment

According to a 4 November report by the ILO Liaison Officer in Rangoon:<sup>57</sup>

- There were 71 forced labor complaints filed from 16 May to 28 October 2009, a 230% increase from the same period in 2008. The latest filings included 52 cases of under-age recruitment into the SPDC Army and 17 cases of forced labor.
- The SPDC subjected complainants and other persons associated with complaints to judicial retaliation, including the filing of criminal charges. All the cases of retaliation stem from complaints filed over the use of forced labor by 328 farmers in Magwe Division. In some of the cases the SPDC:
  - Jailed 12 complainants for up to four years and nine months for “trespassing” on land that they owned.
  - Refused to implement a settlement to return land to complainants and jailed those who aided the complainants.
  - Forced complainants to sign confessions to renounce their original complaints.
- Su Su Nway, Min Aung, and labor activists Thurein Aung, Kyaw Kyaw, Wai Linn, Nyi Nyi Zaw, Kyaw Min, and Myo Min, remain in prison, despite repeated calls from the ILO Governing Body for their release.

On 19 November, in its conclusions concerning the forced labor situation in Burma, the ILO Governing Body expressed “deep concern” about the continued imprisonment of forced labor complainants and called for their immediate release as well as the unconditional release of all imprisoned labor activists. It also said that particular attention should be paid to monitoring infrastructure projects such as oil and gas pipelines.<sup>58</sup>

Separate from the ILO findings, since 1 November SPDC border security forces, at Na Sa Ka headquarters in Kawarbill in Maungdaw Township, Arakan State, have forced about 100 local residents to prepare tents, renovate roads, make and repair chairs, clean the headquarters and other miscellaneous chores.<sup>59</sup>

DISPLACEMENT

Bangladesh pushes back more Rohingya

Rohingya continued their attempts to flee across the border to Bangladesh. However, Bangladesh authorities persistently pushed them back to Burma. In November, Bangladesh authorities pushed back at least 179 Rohingya into Burma, increasing the total number of Rohingya pushed back this year to over 1,350.<sup>60</sup>

UNGA Committee condemns SPDC

On 19 November, the UN General Assembly’s Third Committee condemned the SPDC’s “ongoing systematic violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms” of the Burmese people. The resolution passed 92-26 with 65 abstentions.<sup>61</sup> The resolution:<sup>62</sup>

- Expressed “grave concern” over the trial, conviction, and sentencing of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, and urged the SPDC to release her and all other political prisoners.
- Called on the SPDC to undertake a “transparent, inclusive, and comprehensive” review of the 2008 constitution.
- Urged the SPDC to take the necessary steps to ensure that the 2010 elections are “free, fair, transparent and inclusive.”
- Called on the SPDC to put an end to violations of international human rights and humanitarian law and to end impunity for such acts.
- Called on the SPDC to allow a full, transparent, effective, impartial, and independent investigation into all reports of human rights violations, and to bring to justice those responsible.

Japan ties aid to SPDC reforms

On 7 November, the newly elected Japanese government said that the SPDC could no longer count on unconditional Japanese aid and humanitarian assistance. At the Japan-Mekong Summit in Tokyo, Japanese PM Yukio Hatoyama told SPDC PM Gen Thein Sein that Japan would only consider providing more aid to Burma if the SPDC released Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and all other political prisoners before the 2010 elections.<sup>63</sup>

ECONOMY

Constitution perpetuates state interference in the economy

On 16 November, Sean Turnell, professor of economics at Australia’s Macquarie University, warned that the SPDC’s 2008 constitution would perpetuate the ongoing economic mismanagement plaguing Burma. In an op-ed published in The Irrawaddy, Turnell argued that the constitution and SPDC’s poor track record did not bode well for any hopes that Burma would transition to a market economy:

- Protection of property rights is not guaranteed – the state is the ultimate owner of all land and resources.
- State involvement in both industry and agriculture sectors casts doubt on how truly open the economy will be.
- The consolidation of fiscal powers, particularly taxation, into the hands of the central government is likely to create tension in ethnic nationality areas.<sup>64</sup>

Burma ranks as the world’s third most corrupt country

On 17 November, Transparency International released its annual Corruption Perception Index. The report ranked the SPDC as the third most corrupt government in the world, after Somalia and Afghanistan.<sup>65</sup>
